Mine Workers Appoint New Committees to Negotiate Agreements

Conference With General Managers Arranged to Be Held This Afternoon

On Tuesday afternoon after a meeting lasting over three hours in the K. of P. hall, employees of International and McGillivray coal companies by a majority of 136 to 132 voted in favor of appointing new committees to open negotiations with the operators for new agreements.

The committee for International mine are—W. Rough-eal, Frank Serak and Jack Nash. For McGillivray mine—Chas. Makin, W. Chapman and H. Claes.

Since the local union affiliated about a year ago with the Workers Unity League, there have been two factions. There has never been unity, despite the efforts of the W. U. L. to organize the mine workers into a militant union, and the strike of the past month has widened the breach until the majority at the meeting on Tuesday decided to act independently of the M. W. U. of C. and to appoint committees in place of the union committees, with the understanding they were employees' committees of the mines for whom they worked.

It is reported that Stokluk and Murphy, secretary and organizer of the M.W.U. C., will not be permitted by the non-radical members to take any part whatever in the negotiations, in order to eliminate Communist influence and dictatorship in local affairs.

After One Year!

It was on May 11, 1931, the miners of the Crow's Nest Pass voted to affiliate with Workers Unity League, when in Coleman 294 were in favor and 144 against, over 100 refraining from voting. The following is quoted from a news despatch at that time in the daily press: "It is reported that loyal members of the Mine Workers Union of Canada will not associate themselves with the Unity League, therefore the forces of organized labor will be badly split." After a year of affiliation the rift appears to be as wide as ever, making impossible solid organization of the mine workers, while the Communists endeavor to promote their policy of setting up a revolutionary government, which is generally disapproved by the great majority of Canadian citizens.

Winners at Cranbrook

Among the Coleman prize-winners at Cranbrook musical festival were Freda Antrobus, second in piano and second for singing for those under 12 years; John Pietrasko, second in violin under 12 years; Elizabeth Moores, fourth in violin under 17 years. Several Coleman players were in Upton's orchestra, which was given high marks, and Mr. Moser's orchestra of Hillcrest was awarded 89 marks. Among the visitors from Coleman were Mr. Sam Moores, who drove up several of the competitors, and Mrs. Fred Antrobus. Miss Madeleine Chardon of Blairmore had a number of pupils entered.

Mothers' Day, Sun., May 8

This is observed in all churches and at St. Paul's United church will take the form of a Mothers' Day Pageant at the morning service. Miss Peggy Cole of Bellevue, noted elocutionist, will take part, assisted by the junior choir. Mrs. Currie, a Lethbridge festival medallist will sing.

At the evening service, the Mothers' Day sermon will be preached, and special music rendered by the male quartette and others. You are cordially invited to attend.

ST. ALBAN'S CHURCH

Next Sunday is the fifth after Easter, Rogation Sunday. The services will be 2:30 p.m. Children's service, 3:30 p.m. Bible Class, 7 p.m. Evensong and address.

The Anglican Men's Society will meet in the hall on Thursday at 8 p.m. All are cordially invited.

Red Trail Map

Coleman Board of Trade will subscribe $50 towards the cost of the Red Trail map for 1932. 20,000 will be issued, and copies, when ready, may be had at The Journal office. The delegation attending the conference of Pass boards of trade held at Blairmore included W. L. Rippon, secretary; O. E. S. Whiteside, H. C. McBurney, A. M. Morrison, Mayor Pattinson and Col. R. F. Barnes. President R. Greenway, Secretary J. Rose, J. Perry and Harold G. Long of Lethbridge were present. Luncheon was served in the Greenhill Grill.

Grand Theatre Sold

The above property was sold this week by Andrew Dow to E. A. Regner of Pincher Creek, who will convert it into a garage and service station. Structural alterations and gasoline pumps installation were approved by the council and work is being carried out by Contractor D'Appolonia.

This building was built several years ago, and was operating as a theatre as well as the Palace. It is five years since the moving picture machines were moved over to the Palace.

Margaret Price Graduated

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pinkney of Blairmore attended the graduation exercises of the Royal Alexandra hospital, Edmonton, held in the Masonic temple, at which their niece, Alice Hornquist, was one of the class. Mrs. J. A. Price's daughter, Margaret, a former high school student of Coleman, was also one of the class, and has been appointed to the hospital staff. Mrs. Price returned by motor with Mr. and Mrs. Pinkney. Old Coleman friends join in congratulating Miss Price on the successful completion of her training.

Greetings from World's Wheat King to Coleman Friends

On a world cruise, from a point between Panama and Havana, Cuba, Herman Trelle, former resident of Coleman, where he attended school in Coleman's early days, writes:

"Dear Editor Halliwell: Greetings to you and other friends down in the Crow's Nest. We are nearing the end of a most wonderful health restoring world vacation cruise. The world panorama has been grand to see, but nothing beats good old Alberta to live in. Regards and good luck to you all—Herman and Mrs. Trelle."

Among Mr. Trelle's old school chums here are Arthur and Frank Graham, Mrs. A. F. Short, Mrs. Roy Thomas and Will Gate, and the school he attended stood where the present manse stands. Later school was held in the upper storey of a building where Morrison's garage now stands. Mr. Trelle's father was at that time proprietor of the Pacific hotel, now known as the Empire.

The first school teacher was the Rev. Mr. Robinson, Anglican minister, now Canon Robinson, of Shelburne, Nova Scotia, and Miss McIntyre and Miss Cameron were teachers in those early days of Coleman's history.

The family left here for Edmonton, and later Herman settled at Wembley in the Peace River district, where he was to achieve fame by raising the wheat which three times won the world's wheat championship at the big exhibition in Chicago.

For a while Mr. Trelle suffered a serious breakdown in health, necessitating a year being spent in Keith sanatorium. During his stay there, Mrs. Trelle bravely carried on and was of great assistance to her husband in selecting the seed grain from which was grown their exhibition wheat. As a recognition of their achievements Edmonton Chamber of Commerce honored them at a public gathering and made a presentation.

Forestry Service Changes

The forestry office at Pincher Creek, is to be closed, and Supervisor Alexander and Mr. Taylor are to be transferred to Rocky Mountain House. "Jack" Alexander is well known through the Pass towns, being an ardent golf enthusiast.

He was a capable and tactful official, and the good wishes of many friends and acquaintances will follow him to his new district.

The stations of Crow's Nest Forest Reserve will not be affected by the change, and will now be under the supervision of Supervisor Smith, Calgary, who also has Bow River Forest Reserve under his charge. The change is made by the provincial forestry department to effect economy.

Ryan-Kilgannon Wedding

Mr. S. B. Ryan, of the International Coal Co. office staff, and Miss Agnes M. Kilgannon, were married on April 21, the Rev. F. Lehman officiating, at Holy Ghost church. The witnesses were Mr. H. J. Ryan, of Calgary, brother of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Ryan.

The newly-weds are well known in Coleman and very popular among a large circle of friends, who join in wishing them happiness and prosperity. They will make their home in Coleman.

Softball is the favorite pastime of the high school boys and girls, and every opportunity is taken to practice in the school grounds.

Figures on Strike Voting

A review of the votes cast by Coleman miners on April 11 shows that of approximately 606 qualified to vote on a general strike 266 voted in favor and 57 against; 283 who did not vote. It may safely be surmised that those who did not vote would be in favor of returning to work if the opportunity offered, so that it was in reality a minority vote of Coleman miners. It shows from the above figures there were 350 negative against 256 favoring a strike.

The local ballot voting in favor of the present committee being retained to negotiate with the operators showed a heavier poll, 587 being the total, a majority of 101 in favor.

Amateur Radio Stations

Coleman is on the radio map with three amateur stations. A. S. McIntosh, Earl Price and Wilfrid Hoyle have been granted licenses to broadcast and their ambition is to hear their signals make the circuit of the world. Transmissions are by code only.

Local News

Miss Verda Plante is well on the road to recovery after an operation for appendicitis in the hospital.

Miss Bessie L. Dunlop of the high school staff made a hurried week-end visit to Calgary on April 16th.

Local News

Dr. DeLong left on Sunday for Calgary and will spend a week or two there.

Rev. A. S. Partington attended a meeting of the rural daemery of Macleod in that town on April 19.

Col. R. F. Barnes was a recent visitor at Edmonton on legal business in connection with his law office.

Road relief work is being continued west of Coleman giving employment to a number of unemployed. The grade to McGillivray offices is being widened.

Baseball players are warming up, and the local club will be commencing a series of games with other Pass clubs. The local "Babe Ruth" has not yet been discovered, but Secretary Hayson states he has a star aggregation ready to open the season.

Eileen Richards was awarded second place in the musical festival at Blairmore, competing in the vocal class for those under 18 years. Last year she was awarded a medal, competing in the vocal class for those under 16 years.

Despite the depression, the faithful "Biddy" has been working full time as usual, and the production of eggs has been so plentiful in Granum district that Alex. Easton brought in a motor lorry loaded with cases of eggs to sell in the Pass towns.

R. A. Gardiner, representing R. G. Dan's mechanical agency, made his first annual visit to the Pass towns last week. Which reminds one of the ambitious gent who aspired to be a social climber. Entering a book-store, he acquired for a copy of "Who's Who," in which prominent people are listed. After fumbling around for some time, the shop-keeper called from the back of the shop, informing the customer he hadn't got what he wanted, but he had a copy of "Who he is and what he's got," by R. G. Dun & Co.

Community Hall Needed for Miners Meetings and Other Gatherings

Lack of Room in Small Halls is Heavy Handicap to Local Organizations. Miners Hall is Again Suggested

The need of a hall sufficiently large for meetings has frequently been stressed. The Miners' hall is the place most suited, having accommodation for 600 or more. Meetings in small halls cannot hold half the people who possibly would attend.

The U. M. W. A., who at present hold the title to the Miners Hall, should in fairness hand it over to the miners of Coleman, or a representative committee. It was paid for by Coleman miners, and could be utilized with great advantage by other organizations besides the miners.

A community hall is urgently needed, and this would be the ideal place.

Weddings

Joseph Houda and Helen Louise Cornett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Cornett, were married on April 23, the Rev. A. S. Partington officiating, at St. Luke's, Blairmore. John Pattison and Emily Whalley, daughter of James and Mrs. Martha Whalley of Michel, (the Rev. A. G. McMorine officiating.

A DeKleyn spent two days in the forest at Racehorse Creek. He was tracking a bear, and returning to his camping place, found his horse had broken loose and strayed. Some anxiety was felt by his friends, who organized search parties, but he arrived safely at Coleman, minus his un-trusted steed.

Reducing Costs Of Government

Continuing discussion of the above subject, let us consider in a little more detail some of the many duplications in services on the part of the Federal and Provincial Governments.

First, agriculture. Both Governments maintain experimental farms or experiment, illustration or demonstration stations, forestry farms, etc. This work should be confined exclusively either to the Dominion or to the Provinces, and, as conditions vary so greatly as between the provinces, this class of work might well be left to them. The Dominion Department of Agriculture might well confine its efforts to establishing and maintaining standards of weight and quality of all agricultural and allied products, safeguarding the health of animals, preventing the introduction of diseased animals, impure seed, and infected tree and plant life from abroad. Responsible for the fixing and maintaining of standards of quality, the Dominion would likewise be responsible for promoting the sale of these high standard products in the markets of the world. Let the provinces look after the educational and production end, and the Dominion the maintenance of uniform Canadian standards and the development of our export markets for these uniformly high quality products irrespective of province in which they are produced.

Public health. Here, too, the Dominion might well confine its work to safeguarding the health of all through the prevention of disease resulting from disease-infected people entering the country, while leaving to the provinces the general work of health education among its people, health inspection and disease prevention. And just as the prairie provinces now pay the Dominion for police services, so the Dominion might pay the provinces for carrying on the necessary health work among the Indian wards of the nation. The Federal Department of Health could thus be done away with, and the work performed through the Immigration Department on the one hand and the Provincial Departments of Public Health on the other hand.

There are no more prolific sources of friction between Federal and Provincial Governments than the high standard products, health inspection, taxation, etc. Hardly a year passes that there is not some reference before the courts to settle the respective jurisdiction of Federal and provincial authorities in regard to these subjects. There is also the heart-burning issue where provincial governments through local government boards, utility commissions, or some similar body, seek to protect their people from irresponsible, not to say dishonest, company promoters and high pressure stock salesmen, but whose best efforts are brought to naught because such companies by obtaining Dominion rather than provincial incorporation can defy the provinces.

It would seem as if all company incorporation should be Dominion, rather than partly Dominion and partly provincial. Then any company could do business in any or all the provinces. If some company desired to engage in a purely local business, its incorporation fee might be made smaller, and its charter so restricted, that while its efforts are brought to naught because such companies by obtaining Dominion rather than provincial incorporation can defy the provinces.

Changes such as suggested would mean loss of revenue to the provinces, and increased revenues to the Dominion. It therefore follows that there should be a readjustment of taxing powers. Under the B.N.A. Act, the provinces are limited in their taxing power to the imposition of direct taxes, while the Dominion can impose both direct and indirect taxes. The field of indirect taxation is much wider than the field of direct taxation. The Dominion, therefore, might well withdraw from the latter field and leave it to the provinces. By and large this would mean the dropping by the Dominion of the income tax, and leaving that source of revenue exclusively to the provinces.

This is surely worthy of consideration. In the meantime, however, with both Federal and Provincial Governments levying taxes upon income, and with both governments maintaining income tax departments for the levying and collection of such taxes, it is not possible to eliminate the waste of taxpayers' money resulting from such duplication of departments by some arrangement whereby either the Dominion would collect for the provinces, or the provinces would collect for the Dominion. Under the B.N.A. Act, the provinces are limited in their taxing power to the imposition of direct taxes, while the Dominion can impose both direct and indirect taxes. The field of indirect taxation is much wider than the field of direct taxation. The Dominion, therefore, might well withdraw from the latter field and leave it to the provinces. By and large this would mean the dropping by the Dominion of the income tax, and leaving that source of revenue exclusively to the provinces.

Furthermore, surely it is high time a stop was put to such practices as the one introduced in the recent budget at Ottawa whereby the Dominion imposes a tax on business conducted by provincial governments. The recent budget imposes a tax of five cents on every long distance telephone call. This really means an increase of that amount in long distance telephone tolls, which business in these prairie provinces is the exclusively business of the provincial governments. If that additional sum is to be extracted from the patrons of the long distance lines, then it should accrue to the provincial governments, and not to the Dominion. But the Dominion steps in and imposes this tax on provincially-owned public utilities, and then throws additional expense upon the provinces to collect the tax, and do the additional bookkeeping and accounting work which it will entail. This is most illogical and unfair. It would be just as reasonable for the provinces, if they had the power, to impose a tax upon the business transacted by the post office department.

So, in conclusion, we would again emphasize the view expressed in a previous article in this column, that it is expedient that a conference of all the provinces with the Dominion be held with a view to settling the B.N.A. Act, removing therefrom the many causes of dispute between the Federal authority on the one hand and the provinces on the other, more definitely defining the spheres of control of each, and clarifying their respective fields of taxation. The taking of such action would be a long step forward towards reducing costs of government in this country.

Making Better Use Of Sunlight On Farms

New British Glass Substitute For Window Lighting Is Boon To Farmers

During the past fifteen years there has been much scientific studying of sun rays and their effect on human beings and animals. Ultra-violet rays particularly have been studied. Even the scientists themselves are unaware exactly how ultra-violet rays affect growth, health, and development in both vegetables and animals. They are, however, known to be largely responsible for all three. After exhaustive researches, means have been found not only to produce them artificially, but to facilitate their entry in a natural state into ordinary buildings by using specially prepared materials of low cost for window lightings.

It is probable that this is one of the greatest boons conferred on farmers, poultrymen, market gardeners, and smallholders by scientists for some time. The specially prepared material referred to surpasses ordinary window glass in that it will permit the passage of ultra-violet rays. Glass will not do so. Thus, since it is flexible and almost indestructible, it offers immense possibilities for the lighting of livestock sheds, chick and laying pens for poultry, hot and cold frames in the vegetable and flower garden and special covers for raising young plants in the open much of the usual time.

The advantages of using a material which will transmit ultra-violet rays are not theoretical; they have been proved to be profitable in actual tests. Take poultry for example.

Tests carried out both in this country and England have shown that chicks can be raised earlier in the year in brooders which are lighted with a new material called "WINDOLITE" which has now been made available in Canada, showed that a flock of 30 hens bred ordinary window glass averaged 39.20 eggs per hen for the six months from May to December. Another flock behind the glass substitute averaged 78.27 eggs per hen for the six months.

These figures are, in themselves, conclusive. As far as chicks are concerned, there is decidedly less leg weakness and the usual chicken mortality in brooders is very largely removed. Livestock buildings and barns lighted with this material should be healthier for animals. One eminent British medical authority states his belief that tuberculosis in cattle is largely due to their being deprived of ultra-violet rays in dark sheds in winter.

Not only the garden, but the lettuce and all other small plants can be brought to maturity a fortnight earlier, and have been found to be bigger and of better flavor if grown under covers made of this material.

Another advantage of using the new glass substitute is the extreme cheapness, strength and handleability.

The new British glass substitute for window lighting actually costs less per square foot than ordinary window glass; is unbreakable, except by extreme violence; retains its transparency and ability to pass ultra-violet rays indefinitely and is unaffected by severe climates—yet its weight is less than one fourteenth that of ordinary glass.

Build Up Health With Spring Tonic

The fashion of taking a Spring tonic is based on sound medical grounds. Winter has thinned and debilitated the blood stream so that it isn't carrying enough oxygen. That is the reason for the listless, languid, easily-tired condition so prevalent at this season.

What is needed is a tonic—one that will build new blood and restore and purify the blood stream, and thus enable it to carry the energizing oxygen that quickly revitalizes the whole system. Thousands have proved that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the ideal tonic for this purpose.

Mrs. A. A. West of Welland says: "Again last Spring I became ill. I could not do my work; was pale, weak, and tired all the time. I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they soon made me strong and happy again." Try them and experience for yourself the new strength and vigor which will bring you. At your druggist's in the new glass container. 50c a package.

Registration Of Motor Vehicles In Canada Drops In 1931

For the first time, the registration of motor vehicles in Canada showed a decrease in 1931, the total for all classes being 1,296,896 as against 1,298,886 for 1930, a decrease of 33,052 vehicles, or 2.7 per cent.

A report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows passenger automobile registrations decreased from 1,047,494 cars in 1930 to 1,024,385 last year.

Total sales for 1931, as reported by registration fees, mileage on buses, etc., amounted to $19,684,908, which was $481,375 less than in 1930. Eastern provinces showed increased revenue from this source while the prairie provinces and British Columbia all recorded a decrease. The total gasoline tax collected amounted to $22,546,119 as against $22,655,225 for 1930.

Canada, with an average population of 8.6 persons per motor vehicle, had a greater total registration than any other country except the United States, the United Kingdom and France.

A Real Driving Power

Joy In Work Carries People On To Success

Is there not rather a tendency as we grow older to lose our enthusiasm, to get a little dull, a little blunted, to say that we have sobered down? Yet how a joy in work carries a man on! It drives him forward in the absorbing pursuit of an ideal, through the rough and smooth phases of the world, forgetting all else but the object of his search, in invention, in labor, in art, and—in holiness.

Regina Man Chosen

Colonel A. G. Styles Will Command 1932 Blesley Team

Col. A. G. Styles, of Regina, will be the commander of Canada's 1932 Blesley team, the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association has announced. Col. Styles is officer commanding the 19th Infantry Brigade with headquarters at Regina.

The adjutant of the Dominion's team to participate in the National Rifle Association meet at Blesley will be Captain F. Gardiner, of the Vancouver Regiment.

Members of the team are now being selected and announcement of the complete personnel will be made in May. The team will have 18 shooting members in addition to the two officers named. It will sail from Montreal on June 11, returning to the Dominion about August 1.

Would Change Neighbors

Canadians To North Of France Would Be Welcome

Canadians as neighbors to the north of France would be welcome indeed, were it geographically possible, Jules Jusserand, former French ambassador to the United States, let it be known in an address at Paris.

In a reference to fortresses being built on the French northern frontiers, M. Jusserand, whose address pleaded for less sarcasm and more brotherly love between France and the United States, said:

"Will you (people of the United States) change your neighbors? Take ours and give us the Canadians."

Cuban Earthquake Recorded At Ottawa

Delicate Seismographs At Ottawa Observatory Register Ostruboe

The earthquake at Santiago, Cuba, on February 8, 1932, was well recorded by the seismographs at the Dominion Observatory, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. By means of the seismographs the distance to the epicenter was found to be 2,760 kilometers or 1,700 miles, and the time at the origin 1:15-57 a.m., Eastern Standard Time. The maximum ground displacement at Ottawa was about one-hundredth of an inch. According to press reports the damage in the city of Santiago was estimated at $10,000,000. Nine persons were killed and the casualty list was about 300.

The Age Of Judges

Long Experience Rather Than Youthful Enthusiasm Needed On Bench

It has been said in the House of Commons that judges are too old at 65. No statement could be more absurd. What is needed on the judicial bench is not the fire and enthusiasm of youth, but long experience of life and law. Calm wisdom is the fruit of advancing age. Some of the most famous and permanent judgments in British legal history have been pronounced by men in their seventies and eighties.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Strict Diets Often Unnecessary

It is a well known fact that some foods have a strong tendency to produce excessive stomach acidity and consequent indigestion. By omitting from the diet the diet to certain tasteless unpalatable foods, stomach troubles, in many instances, are slowly overcome. No time is then lost, however, indigestion, gas, etc., are due to excessive acidity and the neutralizing of this extra acid and then sufferers can eat the food they desire and which they want in reason and have no stomach trouble at all. Thousands of people do this daily by merely taking after every meal a little Bilexated Magnesia, which can be had at any good drug store in either powder or tablet form. Bilexated Magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acids, stops food fermentation and stops food fermentation in the stomach of a healthy child. With one good gargle made from Bilexated Magnesia you daily after-eating protection.

C. N. R. Efficiency

Impressive Economy Record Established For Year 1931

Figures upon the operation of the Canadian National Railways for the year 1931 indicate that an impressive economy record was established in the face of heavily declining revenues. The operating revenue for the year reached $177,273,700, as compared with $221,770,445 for the preceding year, a decrease of about 20 per cent. Net operating expenses were $169,688,000 as against $185,249,507 for 1930, a decrease of interest on capital investment, but it is at least an operating surplus of about $7,585,700 for 1931. This, of course, is a very slight help toward paying the enormous burden of interest on capital investment, but it is at least an operating profit.

The really encouraging thing about the report from Montreal, however, is that while freight traffic revenue dropped about 18 per cent., operating expenses were arranged that the gross tonnage carried on each freight train operated was maintained and slightly increased. Speed of operation was increased and fuel consumption decreased. Passenger train service mileage operated was 25 per cent. less in December, 1931, than in December, 1930, and 29 per cent. less than in December, 1928, but locomotives were kept up to the usual average, and "on time" performance for the year set a new high record.

These figures indicate that the efficiency of the system is being improved in the time of adversity, and with an increase in freight and passenger traffic, such as may be expected with a gradual return to normal conditions, the relation of operating net revenue to overhead cost should be greatly improved.—D. P. C. in The Border Cities Star.

Thousands Perish In Earthquake Which Devastates Chinese Areas

Hankow, China.—Chinese reports slowly trickling in from northeast Hupeh province said an earthquake on April 6 took a terrible toll, "several tens of thousands of persons perishing." The dispatches said that the "quake, which slightly jarred the Yangtze Valley, had affected scores of towns and villages in northeast Hupeh."

The reports, whose tardiness illustrates the lack of communications in the interior, painted a picture of appalling conditions as the result of the "quake."

"Human corpses and dead animals are strewn over the ground in the stricken area," the Chinese messages said.

The important walled town of Mancheng was reported to have received the severest jarring, the walls of 70 per cent of the houses having crumbled on their inhabitants.

The dispatches concluded that the "quakes had been a terrible visitation upon the people who already have suffered untold plunderings from Communists and bandits."

Relief from the provincial government was requested.

For Peaceful Solution

Sees Signs Of Co-Operation Between Capital And Labor

Vancouver, B.C.—"I look for the destruction of the capitalist system through co-operation rather than revolution," declared Dr. S. D. Chown, former general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, addressing the Vancouver Presbytery of the United Church here.

"I rejoice in the signs on every hand of co-operation between owners and operatives, the selling of company stock to employees and other like movements," he added.

Has Improved Trade

War In East Has Boosted Business With Australia

Sydney, Australia.—A distinctly valuable improvement in Australian trade with the Far east has resulted from the Sino-Japanese conflict, both China and Japan buying fairly heavily in the Antipodes.

For many years Australia has been slowly building up trade with the east, but the fighting in Manchuria and China has improved that commerce to an extent that would occupy a decade at least in peace time.

Raid On Fraternity House

Toronto, Ont.—A number of University of Toronto fraternity houses were raided by police and many pieces of silverware seized. The silverware, it seems, had been taken from downtown hotels and restaurants as "souvenirs" of valiant exploits and celebrations by the students. The spoons, knives, forks and other tableware were returned to the establishments, and no prosecutions were made.

U. S. Ambassador To Great Britain Predicts A New Era

London, England.—Halling a new era, Andrew W. Mellon, United States ambassador to Great Britain, told the Pilgrims Society there was nothing in world conditions so unprecedented as to justify a lack of faith "in our capacity to deal with them."

This was the first public address as ambassador of the man who made millions in business and then administered the United States treasury under three presidents.

He spoke before a distinguished audience of 400 or more, including the Prince of Wales, Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, and Lord Derby, who presided.

The king sent a message to the Pilgrims, at the same time welcoming Mr. Mellon.

The Prince of Wales, speaking at the end of the banquet, saw proof of the friendship of the United States in sending as ambassador "one of the greatest financiers of their country at this time of world wide economic stress."

The Prince said he would not be able to visit America this year.

The ambassador reaffirmed his faith in "capitalism or whatever means may be applied to the system which has been evolved in adapting individual

Soviet Work Falling Off

Failing To Keep Pace With Five-Year Plan

Moscow, Russia.—Soviet Russia's three most important basic industries, coal, metals and transportation, are failing to keep pace with the program for the final year of the five-year plan, the newspaper Ivestia said.

The admission was made in connection with the publication of an announcement the railroad transport plan for the first quarter of this year was only 86 per cent complete.

During the last few days the paper announced coal production for the first quarter was only 86.9 per cent of the goal set for the final year of the plan and disappointingly slow development of metallurgical production in the U. R. had resulted in a shortage of steel which threatened the large auto and tractor manufacturing plants.

These plants also are suffering from a scarcity of fuel.

Wheat Bonus

Any Announcement On Subject Will Be Made By Prime Minister

Ottawa, Ont.—Any pronouncement of the government's intentions with reference to continuation of the five-cent bonus on wheat sold during the 1932 crop will be made by the Prime Minister, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, told the House of Commons. He was under question by members of the opposition in connection with the estimate to provide for administration of the Canada Grain Act. A. L. Beaulieu (Lib., Vancouver), suggested that in considering this point the government take into account the rights of the barley growers who, he believed, were as much entitled to the bonus as the wheat growers.

Benefit To Canada

Estimated $250,776,000 Brought In By Tourists Last Year

Ottawa, Ont.—Total expenditures of tourists in Canada during 1931, as estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at $250,776,000. This is a decrease of $29,000,000 from the estimated expenditures of the previous year. Entering Canada via ocean ports, tourists spent $12,048,000; from the United States by motor car, $188,129,000; and from that country by rail, $50,629,000.

As against this, Canadians touring abroad spent a decrease of approximately $25,000,000 from the figure in 1930.

Six Advisers For Delegation

Initiative to the machine age." In discussing the way out of the present economic difficulties, he declared: "I do not believe in any quick or spectacular remedies for the ills from which the world is suffering."

Mr. Mellon recalled that during his lifetime he had passed through many crises which invariably followed wars. Economic depressions, he said, "are the price we pay for war and they must be reckoned as a seemingly unavoidable stage in the sequence of events."

The economic life of nations seems to go in cycles, he said, spurting forward in industrial expansion, then inflation and extravagance "which brings its own retribution."

In response to a message from the Pilgrims, the king sent the following: "I cordially thank the Pilgrims of Great Britain and their guests assembled this evening for the loyal terms of their message, and I am glad to think that my son is with them on this auspicious occasion."

"It is indeed a pleasure to me to have this opportunity of associating myself with the welcome they are giving to Mr. Mellon as ambassador from the United States of America."

Vancouver Vessel For Ontario Ports

Inaugurates Freight Service From West Coast To Toronto and Hamilton

Montreal, Que.—Vancouver to Toronto and Hamilton by water is the service being inaugurated by the S.S. Rosebank of the Kingsley Navigation Company, Limited, Vancouver. The vessel is due here shortly after the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence and, after unloading part of her cargo here, will proceed to the Ontario ports.

Cargo from Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal will be taken on board for the return journey. The "Rosebank" was at one time the Canadian Observer of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine Fleet. She left Vancouver on March 21 with a full load of timber and canned salmon.

Sunday Cinemas In England

Bill To Legalize Sunday Picture Shows Passes Second Reading

London, Eng.—A bill which would legalize Sunday motion picture shows passed second reading in the House of Commons by a vote of 235 to 217 after prolonged debate.

The decision was left to a free vote of the House, the voting cutting across all party lines. Sabbatarian elements have waged a campaign against the bill and many members received postcards making such prophesies as one that the Lord would strike them dead if they voted in favor of the measure.

Cinemas have been open on Sunday evenings in London and several other cities for many years without legal sanction. They would definitely have to close on Sundays after next October 7, however, unless the bill passed.

Disband Hitler Army

German Government To Put An End To Political Activities

Berlin, Germany.—The German Government ordered Adolf Hitler to disband his army of 400,000 National Socialist shock troops and put an end to the terrorizing activities for which it held him and his legions responsible.

The sudden blow at the strongest single political organization in the nation came in the form of an emergency decree signed by President Paul von Hindenburg. As soon as it was promulgated, police throughout the country proceeded to enforce it by invading the various Nazi headquarters and seizing materials of war and propaganda.

Was Famous Sleuth

William J. Burns, World Famed Detective, Dies At His Home In Florida

Sarasota, Fla.—William J. Burns, world famed detective, died at his home here recently.

Mr. Burns, who was probably the most famous individual in the detective business, during his active years, died suddenly. He was 70 years old, a native of Baltimore, Md.

He founded the detective agency bearing his name and was director of the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice from 1921 to 1924.

PROMINENT VISITOR

Combining business with pleasure, Gilbert Carmichael, official of Scotland Yard, famous British police organization, is shown as he arrived on the national exchequer and would revolutionize mixed farming. A plan of this type would encourage exports and stimulate the home market.

The farmers of Canada, proceeded Mr. Rowe, for years have witnessed the coal and iron and steel industries bounsed. He believed it was time to take similar action for mixed farming.

The biggest problem in Canada was the rehabilitation of the farmer, said J. L. Brown (Lib., Ligon). The question now was whether farmers were to be responsible men living on farms, deriving satisfaction out of their work and enjoying reading and other forms of education and entertainment, or whether they were to sink to the position of men engaged solely in grubbing out some kind of living from the soil.

Many Countries Will Exhibit

Saskatchewan Farmers Urged To Take Interest In Grain Show

Regina, Sask.—J. A. Mooney and E. B. Cass, of this city, addressed a meeting of the Board of Trade at Yorkton in an endeavor to stimulate interest and enthusiasm in the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in Regina in 1933.

Mr. Mooney told the gathering that more than 30 countries have already signified their intention of entering exhibits at the World's Grain Exhibition and that before long he expected the number would be at least fifty.

"We have one of the best growing grain areas here," Mr. Mooney said, "and it will be a shame if we do not put forth our best efforts to entice and encourage the farmers of the district to enter exhibits at the World's Grain Exhibition."

Mr. Cass outlined ways and means of stimulating interest and enthusiasm among the residents of the small towns and villages and the farmers in the Yorkton district and stated that Saskatchewan should enter at least 10,000 exhibits in the World's Grain Exhibition.

Riots In Auckland

Naval Reserves Called Out To Preserve Order

Auckland, New Zealand.—Royal naval reserves were called out and two squadrons of mounted volunteers were brought into the city as a precautionary measure following fierce unemployed rioting which lasted two hours.

Early morning light showed Queen Street, main business thoroughfare where hundreds of jobless fought police, smashed and looted shops, as though it had been subjected to shell-fire.

It was estimated $85,000 would be required to replace shattered plate glass windows while total damage to property was placed at $500,000.

One hundred civilians and 23 police were injured before the combined efforts of marines from H.M.S. Philomet, police, the fire department and private citizens succeeded in quelling the riots and restoring order.

Aid For Farmers

Advocates Bonusing System To Encourage Mixed Farming

Ottawa, Ont.—Earl Rowe (Cons., Dufferin-Simcoe), debating the Rhodes' budget, pointed to mixed farming as the economic salvation of Canada. It might be necessary to bonus certain products and he suggested two cents for bacon and live beef; one cent for cheese, and three cents a dozen for eggs. This, he said, could be done without a heavy drain on the national exchequer and would revolutionize mixed farming. A plan of this type would encourage exports and stimulate the home market.

The farmers of Canada, proceeded Mr. Rowe, for years have witnessed the coal and iron and steel industries bounsed. He believed it was time to take similar action for mixed farming.

Use More Foreign Wheat

Italy To Lighten Restrictions On Future Imports

Rome, Italy.—Restrictions on the use of foreign wheat again were lightened by government decree.

Beginning April 26, millers of northern and central Italy will be allowed to use imported grain for 60 per cent of their flour, while millers of southern and insular Italy will be permitted to use 85 per cent.

The amount of foreign wheat which could be used in the mixing of flour formerly was 40 per cent and 60 per cent, respectively, having been gradually raised from 25 per cent in view of an insufficient production of domestic grain.

Ottawa, Ont.—Growth in Italian purchases of Canadian wheat is looked forward to here as a result of the increase in the proportion of foreign wheat allowed in the making of flour in Italy. The lightening of restrictions follows the trend of other years when, to encourage consumption of domestic wheat, restrictions are imposed early in the crop season and gradually relaxed as the domestic supply diminishes.

Ulster Is Loyal

Northern Ireland To Remain True To The British Empire

Enniskillen, Northern Ireland.—Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, told a Unionist meeting that, whatever happened in the controversy between Great Britain and the Irish Free State, nothing would make his government "flinch in upholding the flag which so long has flown over Ulster, the United Kingdom, and the rest of the Empire."

A resolution expressing unshakable loyalty to the King and a determination at all cost to remain within Great Britain and the empire was adopted by the meeting. (The Unionist party is the government party in Ulster.)

Resigns Seat In Commons

Member For Royal, N.B., Hands In His Resignation

Ottawa, Ont.—George B. Jones, former Conservative Minister of Labor and former member of the New Brunswick legislature, has resigned his seat in the House of Commons for the constituency of Royal, N.B. The resignation, with an accompanying letter by Mr. Jones was read in the House by Mr. Speaker Black.

The action was taken by Mr. Jones on learning that a contravention of the House of Commons' rules had occurred by reason of Jones' brother, Apohqui, N.B., having supplied medical goods for needy Indians on orders of the Indian medical director. The firm is not operated by Mr. Jones personally. It is an incorporated firm, and had it been a corporate one, it is understood, the provision of the act would not apply. The amount of goods supplied, it is understood, was small.

Distribute Flower Seeds

Canadian Horticultural Society To Donate Seeds To Saskatchewan

Ottawa, Ont.—Flower seeds, for distribution to residents in southern Saskatchewan, where the drought of last year took toll of crops and flowers, will be collected in the east under the direction of the Canadian Horticultural Council. Women's institutes and horticultural societies in eastern Canada will be asked to make donations of seeds and these will be distributed by the Saskatchewan relief commission, in co-operation with the horticultural council.

F. C. Nunnick, chairman of the "Beauty Canada" campaign, announced distribution plans here.

Unemployment System To Be Used Shortly Will Be Revealed

Winnipeg, Man.—Legislation to be introduced shortly in the Dominion Parliament by Premier R. B. Bennett will reveal the system of unemployment relief to be used after May 1.

W. R. Clubb, Minister of Public Works, stated in the Manitoba legislature. Freshly returned from the Dominion-Provincial Conference on unemployment relief at Ottawa, Mr. Clubb said he was not at liberty to announce the decisions of the conference.

The back-to-the-land scheme endorsed by the Manitoba Government aroused interest at the conference. Mr. Clubb said, W. A. Gordon, Dominion Minister of Immigration, had already placed some persons with means on the land and had intimated legislation somewhat along the lines of the Manitoba scheme might be brought in to provide for placing persons without means on farms.

Premier Bennett had told the conference his government was studying the various schemes to determine the feasibility of an unemployment insurance scheme. No Dominion legislation in this regard was to be expected this session, however, Mr. Clubb had learned.

A resolution asking the Dominion Parliament to enact legislation to authorize Manitoba to establish a provincial bank was passed by a vote of 26 to 16.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

April showers and snowstorms bring joy to thousands of farmers and business men in the parched areas of southern Saskatchewan and southeastern Alberta. Hopes are raised and faith renewed to tackle the job afresh following last year's bitter experience. Though prices may be low in comparison with former years, there is some hope of reward and besides, useful occupation which keeps men from brooding.

Last year, thousands of farmers in southern Saskatchewan got nothing for their season's work. The previous year they got very little. The wind and drought, natural enemies of the farmer, cleaned them. Last week the writer saw a couple of hundred farmers with their big wagons and teams of horses hauling seed grain from a Saskatchewan pool elevator. There was no thought of striking against world conditions. In the hope that this year would see a turn in the tide of adverse crop conditions and low prices, they set out with high hopes to sow another crop. A mighty good object lesson to those who when the opportunity offers to go to work, refuse.

The great majority of the world's workers carry on in faith. Providence requires that we plan for the future, but also demands that we make the best of each day and not excuse ourselves from constructive effort because times are bad. Individuals can contribute largely to a return of more prosperous times by doing their share daily, in fighting adversity and doing as the farmer does. Plant the seed of faith and goodwill, and see how happy you'll make yourself as well as others. He who expects life to be a bed of roses will always be a disappointed and soured man. Life always was and will be a battle-ground of ideals—those which tend to lift us upward and those which try hard to pull us down. Man has the choice to make or mar his career, no matter how humble or exalted his station in life may be.

Over 1900 years ago the Saviour of mankind was crucified by his own people. The principles he expounded have endured. In more modern times Abraham Lincoln served his people well, and though he was not cast aside and betrayed, yet he was the victim of an assassin. Public opinion is the most fleckle thing imaginable. Mobs are swayed not by logic but by passion.

Men of principle who have served labor for years in the Crows Nest Pass have had to walk the thorny path of scowling looks and biased criticism, derided by men of unknown quantity whose chief claim to prominence has been similar to that of the circus barker. Yet the delusion from which many are now suffering will pass away, and those who have been occupying the stage front or the soap box will pass into the limbo of forgotten things.

The march of events in the Crows Nest Pass shows no progress towards a settlement of the strike. Meagre relief is being issued, the scarcity of which adds to prevailing discontent and makes it difficult for strike leaders to maintain a united front. Many men openly express a desire to return to work. Meetings of workers indicate no modification of the union attitude, while operators maintain the right to run their mines without interference. The duration of the deadlock depends on the sinews of war, in the way of supplies, for those who are earning nothing.

Paint odours mingle with other signs of spring. Arbor day everyone is enjoined to observe by planting trees. Smudges from back-yard bonfires will assail us on all sides. How welcome these springtime activities are. People have been itching the past week to get out, while spring cleaning and garden work has been delayed by snowstorms and cold weather. From now on every householder who takes pride in his surroundings will have ample opportunity to do his share in making Coleman attractive. There is great scope for work and there is much to be said for it, even if only for the healthy and unaccustomed exercise it furnishes to those whose daily tasks are mainly indoors.

Five years ago the Prince of Wales, in commemoration of his Canadian tour, donated peony plants to urban centres, Coleman sharing in the gift. These were planted in the grass plot by the town hall. J. Houghton and "Bill" Burrows have tenderly watched their budding career, which until last year was devoid of buds. Pete Smith would add to the associations of this little square of grass by having a memorial cairn erected and embedding therein the bronze plaque on which is inscribed Coleman's roll of honor. The proposal is commendable, and should be brought to fruition as early as possible.

The reason many get nowhere is that they are swayed by every shade of thought and opinion and have no mind of their own to decide. It is a common failing, and accounts for the vast army of the mediocre.

Combine to Honor Railroad Veteran

W. G. Chester Serves Order Railway Conductors for Quarter Century

When W. G. (Billy) Chester, of Winnipeg, retired after twenty-five years service as general chairman of the Order of Railway Conductors, something of the character that had won him the esteem of not only the men for whom he acted as chief spokesman, but of the company with which he negotiated was revealed by Grant Hall, senior vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, when he said:

"I have been associated with Mr. Chester for many years. Never once has he broken his word. We often differed in our views, but I always knew that when he told me something, he at least was sincerely convinced that it was right."

W. G. CHESTER
Speak to the conductors whom he represented as well for a quarter of a century and one learns that "Billy" Chester was "a square shooter," than which in the ranks of his kind there is no prouder title. Chester is sparing of words and always has been. Throughout his career as head of his order he has maintained the balance of a keen loyalty to his men and to the Canadian Pacific Railway, with a realization that discipline was as important for the protection of the former as the latter. He knew how to be firm when what he thought were the rights of his men were at stake, without creating ill-feeling in the minds of company officials with whom he might be negotiating.

This is what Chester himself has to say of these relationships: "My relations with the company of the organization and with the general officers of the company have been most friendly and satisfactory and the boys on the road have always given me a fair break. I have had the same opinion of the company's officials. I have tried to reciprocate."

Mr. Chester began railroad work in 1881, and had 25 years with the company before entering the service of his Order.

Here and There

Forty British sportsmen will make up five parties which have arranged to fish trout and salmon on the Miramichi River, N.B., during 1932, according to announcement by the provincial director of information and tourist travel.

Canada shipped more than 5,000,000 pairs of rubber and rubber-soled boots and shoes valued at approximately $4,408,100 to more than 80 countries during 1931, according to information given out by the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce.

Travelling Canadian Pacific across the Dominion from Detroit and visiting Niagara Falls, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Saint John prior to sailing by S.S. Melita for their home countries, eight European Ford Motor dealers were lavishly entertained at all cities they stopped at.

S.S. Montclare, the ship that inaugurated Canadian Pacific ocean passenger service at Halifax this winter after a lapse of twenty years, saluted the port with a shrill blast of her whistle Good Friday evening when she ended her historic tour to Maritime ports for the 1931-1932 season.

Scotland will send an official Trade Mission ship to Canada this spring with a view to developing closer business relations with the Dominion. Over a hundred Scotch firms have already booked space on the ship which has been fitted out for the purpose by the Corporation of Glasgow.

Her Majesty, Queen Mary, and her two sons, the Duke of York and Prince George, showed great interest in the Canadian Industries Fair at Olympia, London, on the occasion of their visit. The Royal party was received by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner for Canada.

The highest Canadian mountain ski ascent was made in March when Russell H. Bennett of Minneapolis, Clifford White of Sand, and Joe Weiss of Basher, accomplished the unprecedented feat of climbing to the peak of the Snow Dome, centre of the vast Columbia ice fields. The peak is over 11,000 feet above sea level.

Bargain rates are forecast for western lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said C. B. Foster, general traffic manager of the railway, on his recent arrival in Winnipeg after an official visit to the Pacific Coast. The successful experiment in popular low rates excursions in Eastern Canada this year has invited consideration of extension of the project to the West, he added.

The importance of a properly made up invoice or billhead cannot be overestimated. See that your stationery properly represents your business and leave your orders with The Journal. Envelopes carry your message to its destination. They are important, and this office can suggest attractive printing copy.

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

The recognition of the great thing that had come into her life left her a little breathless and shaken. But she did not seek to evade or deny it. The absolute candour of her mind—could even to itself—accepted the truth quite simply and frankly. No false shame that she had, as far as actual fact went, given her love unasked, tempted her to disguise from herself the reality of what had happened. For good or ill, whether Blaise returned her love or not, it was his.

But in her inmost heart she believed that he, too, was half-fearfully half-joyfully recognizing the penting force which surged behind the bars of his deliberate abstinence.

True, he had never definitely spoken of his love in so many words, but Lady Anne had supposed the key to his silence. The past still bound him! Alive, Neeta had held him by her beauty; and dead, she still held him with the cords of remorse and unavailing self-reproach—cords which could bind almost as closely as the strands of love.

But for that—
The hot colour surged into Jean's cheeks at the sweet, secret thought which lay behind that "but." Blaise cared! Cared for her, needed her, just as she cared for and needed him. To her woman's eyes, newly anointed with life's sacramental oil and given sight, it had become suddenly evident in a hundred ways, most of all evident in his sudden effort to conceal it from her.

So much that he had said, or had not said—those clipped sentences, bitten off short with a savage intention that had often enough troubled and bewildered her, now found their right interpretation. He cared . . . but the bondage of the past still held. And with that thought came reaction. The brief, quivering ecstasy, which had sent little fugitive trills and currents racing through every nerve of her, died suddenly like a damped-out fire, as she realized all that that bondage implied.

It was possible he might never break the silence which he himself had decreed. From the very beginning he had recognized—and insisted upon—the fact that they were only "ships that pass," and though now, for a little space, fate had retarded the course of each into the same channel, a year, at most, would float them out again on to the big ocean of life where vessels signal—and passed—each other. She must, on the ordinary course of events, return eventually to Beltrando, while Blaise remained in England. And that would be the end of it.

She knew the man's dogged pertinacity; he would hold to an idea or belief immovably if he conceived it right, no matter what the temptation to break away. And in the flood of light vouchsafed by Lady Anne's disclosure, she felt convinced that he had somehow come to regard the tragic happenings of the past as standing between him and any happy future. Why, Jean could not altogether fathom, but she guessed that the dominant factor in the matter was probably an exaggerated consciousness of responsibility for his wife's death, and perhaps, too, a lingering tenderness, a subconscious feeling of loyalty to the dead woman, which urged him not to sacrifice of his own personal happiness as some kind of atonement.

Unless—and a swift spasm of pain shot through her, searing its way like a tongue of flame—unless Lady Anne had been altogether mistaken in her fixed belief that Blaise had not really cared for his wife but had only been carried away on the swift tide of passion—that tide which runs so fiercely and untrammelled in hot youth.

Jean had her black hour then, when she faced the fact that although her love was given, and although she treacherously believed it was returned, she would probably never know the supreme joy of utter certainty, never hear the beloved's voice utter those words which hold all heaven for the woman who hears them.

But, through the darkness that closed about her, there gleamed a single thread of light—the light of her own bestowal of love. Even if she never knew, of a surety, that Blaise cared, even if—and here she shrank, but forced herself to face the possibility—she was mistaken, and he did not care for her in any other way save as a friend—his "little comrade"—still still there would remain always the golden gleam of love that has been given. For no one who loves can be quite unhappy.

CHAPTER XVII.

In the Rose Garden.

The chaldean of the dying skies had deepened into the glowing sapphires of early June—deep, deep, setting blue, tremulous with heat. On the sundial, the shadow's finger pointed to twelve o'clock, and the sleepy hush of noon hung over the rose-garden where Jean was gathering roses for the house.

"Can't I help?"
Burke's voice broke across the doorway quiet so unexpectedly that she jumped, almost letting fall the scissors with which she was scientifically snipping the stems of the roses. She bestowed a small frown upon the head and shoulders appearing above the wooden gate on which he leaned.

"It's not very helpful to begin by giving one an electric shock," she complained. "How long have you been there?"

His attitude had a repose about it which suggested that he might have been standing there some time watching her.

"I don't know. But as I am here, may I come in?"

Without waiting for her answer, he unlatched the gate and came striding across the velvet greenness of the lawn.

Since the day when she had lunched at Willow Ferry, and learned, as she believed, to understand and make allowances for the bitterness which was so warped Judith's nature, her acquaintance with both brother and sister ripened rapidly into a friendly intimacy. But the fact that Burke's feelings towards her was something other, and much warmer than mere friendship, had failed to penetrate her consciousness.

It was patent enough to the lookers-on, and probably Jean was the only one amongst the little coterie of intimate friends who had not realized what was impending.

It is not very often that a woman remains entirely oblivious of the small, unmistakable signs which go to indicate a man's attitude towards her. In Jean's case, however, her thoughts were so engrossed with the one man that, at the moment, all other men occupied but a very shadowy relationship towards the realities of life as far as she was concerned.

So that she scarcely troubled to look up as Burke halted beside her, but went on cutting her roses unconcernedly, merely observing:

"Idlers not allowed. You can make yourself useful by paring the thorns off the stems." She gestured towards a basket which stood on the ground at her side, almost overflowing with its scented burden of pink and white and crimson roses.

He glanced at the rusted head bent studiously above the bush rose and there was a gleam, half angry, half amused, in his eyes. His fingers went uncertainly to his pocket, where reposed a serviceable knife, then suddenly he drew his hand sharply away, empty.

"No," he said. "I didn't come over to be useful this morning. I came over"—he spoke slowly, as though endeavoring to gain her attention—"on a quite different errand."

There was a vibration in his voice that might have warned her, but she had been less intent upon her task of wrestling with a refractory branch. As it was, she merely questioned absently:

"And what was the 'quite different errand'?"

The next moment she felt her hand close over both hers, gardening scissors and washable gloves notwithstanding.

"Stop cutting those confounded flowers, and I'll tell you," he said roughly.

She looked up in astonishment, and at last, a glimmering of what was coming dawned upon her. Even the blindest of women, the most preoccupied, must have read the expression of his eyes at that moment.

"Oh, no—no," she began hastily. "I must finish cutting the roses—really, Geoffrey."

She tried to release her hands, but he held them firmly.

"No," he said coolly. "You won't finish cutting your flowers—at least, not now. You're going to listen to me."

He drew the scissors from her grasp, and they flashed like a fish in the sunshine as he tossed them down on to the rose basket. Then, quite deliberately, he pulled off the loose gloves she was wearing and his big hands gripped themselves suddenly, closely, about her elbow, bared ones.

"Geoffrey—"

Her voice wavered uncertainly. The realization of his intent had come upon her so unexpectedly, rousing her from her placid unconsciousness, that she felt stunned—nervously unsurely to deal with the situation. She struggled a little, instinctively, but he only laughed down at her, his ring of that terrible triumph in his voice, holding her effortlessly, with all the ease of his immense strength.

"It's so good, Jean. You've got to hear it now. I've waited long enough." He paused, then drew a deep breath. "I love you!" he said slowly. "My God, how I love you!"

There was an element of wonder in his tones, and she felt the strong hands gripping her tremble a little. Then their clasps tightened and he drew her towards him.

"Say you love me," he demanded. "Say it!"

It was then Jean found her voice.

The imperious demand, infringing on that secret inner claim of which she alone knew, stung her into quick decision.

"But I don't! I don't love you!"

Then, as she saw the blank look in his eyes, she went on hastily: "Oh, Geoffrey, I am so sorry, I never guessed—I never thought of your caring."

"You never guessed! Good God!" with a harsh laugh—"I should have thought I'd made it plain enough. Why, even the first day, on the river—I wanted you then. What do you suppose has brought me to St. Staple every day? Affection for Blaise Tormarin?"—cynically.

"I thought—I thought—"She cast about in her mind for an answer, then presented him with the simple truth. "I'm afraid I never thought about it at all. I just took your coming over for granted. I knew you and Judith were old friends and neighbors, so it seemed quite natural for you to be here often—just as Claire Latimer is."

Burke searched her face for a moment. He was thinking of the other women he had known—women who would never have remained blind to his meaning, who had, indeed, shown their willingness to come halfway more than half-way—to meet him.

"I really believe that's true," he said at last, grudgingly. "But if it is, you're the most unselfish woman I've ever come across."

"Of course it's true," she replied simply. "I'm sorry, Geoffrey, but I like you far too much to have wished to hurt you."

"I don't want liking. I want your love. And I mean to have it. You may not have understood before, Jean, but you do now."

He drew herself away from him a little.

"That doesn't make any difference, Geoffrey. I have no love to give you," she said quietly.

He shook his head. "I won't take no," he said doggedly. "I like you far too much to have wished to hurt you. I mean to have you. . . . Don't you understand? It's no use fighting against me. You may say no, now; you may say no fifty times. But one day you'll say—yes."

Jean's slight face tensed.

"You are mistaken," she said, in a chill, clear voice calculated to set an impassable space between them. "I'm not a cave woman to be forced into marriage. Oh, the ludicrous side of this imperious kind of wooing! striking her suddenly—"don't be absurd Geoffrey! You can't seize me by the hair and carry me off to your own particular hole in the rocks, you know." She began to laugh a little.

"Let's just go on being good friends—and forget that this has ever happened."

She held out her hand, but he took no notice of the little friendly gesture. There was a red gleam in his eyes, a smouldering glow, needed but a breath to fan it into flame.

"You speak as if it were something that was over and done with," he said in a low, tense voice. "But it isn't! It never shall be. I love you and want you, and I shall go on loving you and wanting you as long as I live."

"Jean—Blest!" his voice suddenly softened incredibly—"I'll try to be more gentle. But when a man loves as I do, he doesn't stop to choose his words." He stepped closer to her.

"Oh! You little, little thing! Why, I could pick you up and carry you off to my cave with two fingers, Jean, when will you marry me?"

His big frame towered beside her. He paid no more attention to her dismissal of him than if she had not spoken, and she was conscious of an odd feeling of impotence.

"You don't seem to have understood me," she said forcing herself to speak composedly. "If I loved you, you'd have no need to 'carry me off' to your cave. I'd come—gladly. But I don't love you, Geoffrey. And I shall never marry a man I don't love."

"You'll marry me," he returned stubbornly. "Do you think I'm going to give you up so easily? If you do, you're mistaken. I love you, and I'll teach you to love me—when you're my wife."

The two pairs of eyes met, a challenging defiance flashing between them. Jean shrugged her shoulders.

"I think you must be mad," she said contemptuously, and turned to leave him.

At the same instant his hands gripped her shoulders and he swung her round facing him again.

"Mad!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Yes, I am mad—mad for you. You little cold thing! Do you know what love is—man's love?"

He drew his arms close round her like a vice of steel, lifting her off her feet, so that she hung helpless in his embrace. For a moment his eyes burned down into hers—the hot flames of desire that blazed in them seeming almost to burn her—the next, he had hidden his face against the warm white curve of her throat, where a little afflicted pulse throbbled temptingly. Then, as though the touch of her snatched the last link of his self-control, his mouth sought hers, and he was kissing her savagely, crushing her soft, whining lips beneath his own. Her slender body swayed helpless as a reed in his strong grip, while the tide of his passion, like some fierce, untamable flood, swept over her resistlessly.

When at last he released her, she stood back from him, rocking a little instinctively he stretched out his hand to steady her.

"Don't . . . touch me!" she panted, clutching her arms.

The words came driven between clenched teeth chokingly. Her face was milk-white and her eyes blazed at him out of its pallor. She felt as if her heart were beating in her throat, stifling her, and for a little space other physical stress held her silent.

But she fought it back, asserting her will against her weakness. "How dare you?" There was bitter anger in her still tones. "How dare you kiss me like that?"

"With a mere moment she passed her handkerchief across her lips and then let it fall on the ground as if it were something unclean. He winced at the gesture; for a moment the passion died out of his face and a rueful look, almost of schoolboy abashment, showed in his eyes.

"Do you feel like that about it?" he said, nodding towards the handkerchief.

"Just like that," she returned. "Do you think—I had known—I would have been kissing you like this?"

"But I thought we were friends—I never dreamed I couldn't trust you."

"Well, you can't," he said unsteadily. The sight of her slender, defiant figure and lovely, tilted face, with her eyes blazing, had had kindled showing like a scarlet stain against his whiteness, sent the blood rioting through his veins once more. "You'll . . . you'll never be able to trust any man who loves you, Jean."

Her thoughts flew to Blaise. She would trust him, she would trust him at any time, always. But then, perhaps—the afterthought came like a knife-thrust—perhaps he did not care! "A man who loved me," she said sadly, "would not do what you've just done."

"He would—sooner or later. Unless his veins ran milk and water!" He drew a step nearer and stood staring down at her solemnly. "Do you know what you're like, I wonder? With your great golden eyes and your mandarin mouth and your little cliff in your white chin. . . . You're angry because I kissed you. I wonder I didn't do it before! I've wanted to, dozens of times. But I wanted your love more than a passing kiss. I've waited for it, I've waited all these weeks. And now you refuse it!"

"You're not even understood that you're all earth and heaven to me. God! How blind you must have been!"

She was silent. Her anger was waning, giving place to a certain listless comprehension of the mighty force which had suddenly broken bondage in the man beside her. Dimly, from her own knowledge of the yearning bred of the loved one's nearness, she envisaged what these last weeks must have meant to a man of Burke's temperament. Was it any wonder, when suddenly made to realize that the woman he loved not only did not love him in return, but had failed even to cease his love for her, that his stormy spirit had rebelled—flung off its shackles? An element of self-reproach tinged her thoughts. In a measure the fault had been hers; her self-absorption was to blame.

"Yes," she acknowledged. "I am afraid I have been blind, Geoffrey. Indeed—indeed I would have prevented all this if I had known, if I had guessed. But, honestly, I just thought of you—you and Judith—as friends."

"I believe you really did," he said slowly, almost incredulously. Then, as though in swift corollary: "Jean, I think I rather enjoy playing with the personal element behind the proffered counsel."

Jean glanced at him between her lashes. So that was it! He was jealous—jealous of Burke! At last something had happened to him, the joints of his armor of assumed indifference! Her heart sang a little pang of thanksgiving, and all that was woman in her rose bubbling to meet the situation. In an instant she had recaptured her splendor.

"I think I rather enjoy playing with the personal element behind the proffered counsel."

"There are—grinly. And it is precisely against those possibilities that I am warning you."

"Don't you think it's rather bad taste on your part to warn me against a man who is admittedly on terms of friendship with you?"

"No, I don't—steadily. 'Nor should I care if it were. When it's a matter of you and your safety, the question of who doesn't enter into the thing at all."

"My safety!" jeered Jean softly.

Enough that you don't love me. . . . But I shall never give you up. You're mine—my woman!" The light of possession flared up once more in his eyes. "Do you remember I told you once that, if a man makes up his mind, he can get his own way over most things? Well, it's true."

He paused a moment, then abruptly swung round on his heel and, without a word of farewell, strode away across the garden, towards the gate by which he had entered.

As the latch clicked into its place behind him, Jean was conscious of a sudden tremor, of a curious, unaccountable shudder, as though his words held something of prophecy. The man's dominating personality seemed to swamp her, overwhelming her by its sheer physical force.

The remembrance of her sister dream, and of the dream-Burke's threat: "It's too late to try and run away. If you don't come into my parlor, you'll be stamped with the mark of the beast forever," returned to her with a disagreeable sense of menace.

She shivered, and, picking up her basket, almost ran back to the house, as though seeking safety.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Cross-Purposes.

In the task of arranging her roses in the various bowls and vases Blaise had set in readiness for her, Jean found a certain relief from the feeling of terror which had invaded her. Something like a homely everydayness of the occupation served to relax the tension of her mind, keyed up and overwrought by the stress of her interview with Burke, and it was with almost her usual composure of manner that she greeted Blaise when presently he joined her.

"I've raided the rose-garden today," she said, smilingly indicating the mass of scented blossom that lay heaped up on the table. "I expect when John finds out he will proceed to meditate upon something for my benefit with boiling oil in it."

John was one of the gardeners to whom Jean's joyous and wholesale robbery of his first-fruits was a daily cross and affliction. Only chloroform would ever have reconciled him to the cutting off of a solitary bloom while still in its prime.

Blaise regarded the tangle of roses considerably.

"I wonder you fought time to gather so many. When I passed by the rose-garden, you were—otherwise occupied."

The quietly uttered comment sent the blood rushing into Jean's face. When had he passed? What had he seen?

She kept her eyes lowered, seemingly intent upon the disposition of some exquisite La France roses in a black Wedgwood bowl.

"What do you mean?" she asked hesitantly.

Tormarin was silent a moment. Had she looked at him she would have surprised a restless pain in the keen eyes he bent over her.

"Jean"—he spoke very gently—"have I—to congratulate you?"

It was difficult to preserve her poise of indifference when the man she loved put this question to her, but she contrived it somehow. Women become adepts in the art of hiding their feelings. The conventions demand it of them.

Jean's answer fluttered in the airy lightness of a butterfly in the sun.

"I am sure I can't say, unless you tell me upon what grounds?"

"You know of none, then?"

"None."

She blushed the end of a stalk and surveyed the Wedgwood bowl critically. Tormarin felt like shaking her.

"Then," he said gruffly, "let me suggest you revise your methods. The woman who plays with Geoffrey Burke might as safely play with an unexploded bomb."

His voice betrayed him, revealing the personal element behind the proffered counsel.

Jean glanced at him between her lashes. So that was it! He was jealous—jealous of Burke! At last something had happened to him, the joints of his armor of assumed indifference! Her heart sang a little pang of thanksgiving, and all that was woman in her rose bubbling to meet the situation. In an instant she had recaptured her splendor.

"I think I rather enjoy playing with the personal element behind the proffered counsel."

"There are—grinly. And it is precisely against those possibilities that I am warning you."

"Don't you think it's rather bad taste on your part to warn me against a man who is admittedly on terms of friendship with you?"

"No, I don't—steadily. 'Nor should I care if it were. When it's a matter of you and your safety, the question of who doesn't enter into the thing at all."

"My safety!" jeered Jean softly.

(It was barely half an hour since Burke had inspired her with that sudden fear of him and of his compelling personality.)

"Well, if not your safety, at least your happiness," answered Burke.

"It's very kind of you to interest yourself, but really my happiness has nothing whatever to do with Geoffrey Burke."

That was true!

He flashed the question at her, and there was that in his tone which set her pulses a-thrill, quenching the light-hearted spirit of banter that had led her to torment him. It was the note of restrained passion which she had heard before in his voice, and which had always power to move her to the depths of her being.

"Perfectly true." She faltered a little. "But—forcing herself to a defiance that was in reality a species of self-defence—to see that it concerned you, Blaise."

"It concerns me in so far as Burke is not the sort of man that a woman can make a friend of. It's all or nothing with him. And if you don't intend to give him all, you'd better give him nothing."

His glance, grave and steady, met here, and she knew then, of a certainty, that he had witnessed the scene which had taken place in the rose-garden, when Burke had held her in his arms and the flood of his passion had risen and overwhelmed her. He had witnessed that—and had misunderstood it.

She was conscious of a fierce resentment against him. It mattered nothing to her that, in the light of her conscious answer to his questions, he was fully justified in the obvious conclusion he had drawn. She did not stop to think whether her anger was reasonable or unreasonable.

She was simply furious with him for suspecting her of flirting—odious word!—with Geoffrey Burke. Well, if he chose to think thus of her, let him do so! She would not trouble to explain—to expiate her self.

She regarded him with stormy eyes.

Needless to understand, Blaise, that I want neither your advice nor your criticism. If I choose to make a friend of Geoffrey Burke or of any other man—I shall do so without asking your permission or approval. What do, or don't do, is no business of yours."

For a moment they faced each other, his eyes, stormy as her own, dark with anger. His hands clenched themselves.

"If I could," he said hoarsely, "I would track you to my business."

He wheeled round and left the room without another word. Jean stood staring dazedly at the blank panels of the door which had closed behind him. She wanted to laugh . . . or to cry. The veil between them—the veil which she would not reveal the thing he was so sedulously intent on keeping from her. To cry, because he had taken her pretended indifference at its face value, and so another film of misunderstanding had risen to thick between them—because the veil which he would not, and she, being a woman, could not, draw aside.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Spider.

Probably masculine obtuseness and the feminine faculty for dissimulation are together responsible for more than half the broken hearts with which the highways of life are littered.

The Reconciler. Part, the Other Woman, he never so guileful—the Other Man, the case may be, are none of them as potent a menace to the ultimate happy issue of events as the mountain of small misunderstandings which a man and a maid in love are capable of piling up for themselves.

The man is prone to see only that which the woman intends he shall—and no self-respecting feminine thing is going to unveil the mysteries of her heart until she is very definitely assured that that is precisely what the man in the case is aching for her to do.

So she dissembles with all the skill which Nature and a few odd thousand years or so of tradition have taught her and pretends that the Only Man in the World means other than what he means. With the result that she probably goes silently and sadly away, convinced that he hasn't an outside chance, while all the time she is simply quivering to pour out at his feet the whole treasure of her love.

In this respect Blaise and Jean blundered as much as any other love-begoggled pair.

Following upon their quarrel over the matter of Jean's attitude towards Geoffrey Burke, Tormarin retreated once again into those fastnesses of aloof reserve which seemed to deny the existence of what might be called "magnetic moments" at Montevana. And Jean, because she was unhappy, flitted out

How It Works

One of childhood's choicest queries has ever been and ever will be: "How does it work?" and it seemed a wholly enthralling idea to two young passengers, who recently travelled from Nottingham, England, to Lemberg, Sask., when Engineer Fred Munt, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, invited them into the cab of his huge "2800" type locomotive. The young travellers were Walter and Willie Wilson, aged 12 and 10 years, who journeyed alone from their grandmother's home in the Old Country to join their mother.

They crossed the Atlantic in the Canadian Pacific liner Montclare and the Dominion on C. P. R. lines, making many friends and seeing many absorbing sights en route. Picture shows the interested pair and their kindly tutor in a brief explanation of the mysteries of the gauges of the great engine.
And what boy, either in Canada or England, would not envy them?

Letter to The Press

The Stand of the Striking Miners of the Crows Nest Pass

(The editor is not responsible for opinions expressed in letters to The Press, and reserves the right to reject any communication submitted.

endorsement of opinions or policies.
—H. T. H.)

During the course of our strike, the coal operators, through the press and the various other means at their disposal, have created the opinion that the miners are responsible for conducting an unjustified strike. They are trying to make the impression that this strike is purely a political strike, and the deadlock that exists between the coal miners and the operators, in Coleman, Blairmore and Bellevue, is because the miners insist upon the coal operators recognizing the Mine Workers' Union of Canada, which is affiliated to the Workers'
Unity League.

The operators state in the press that they are not for the worsening of working conditions of the miners.
On the above basis they seek to turn all opinion against the strikers.

If the above is so, then there would be no deadlock and the strike would be and can be settled at any time. The coal operators in Coleman, on March 15th, told the ne-giation committee that there would be a small wage cut. We know that the coal operators of West Canadian Collieries, Blair-more and Bellevue, came out openly for the laying off of fifty men in each mine. The strike was started in all mines due to the operators, and not the men, breaking their agreement, and virtually forcing the miners to strike. Today, while they say that this strike is purely political, it is they that make it so.

They demand first of all that the miners give up the right to organization; they refuse to negotiate with the committee elected by the miners, and want to take away from the men the right to elect whatever committee they wish to represent them.

We never asked the coal operators to recognize the Mine Workers' Union of Canada, nor do we ask for the check off, or the closed shop.

We are fighting for No Wage Cuts, No Lay-Offs, for the Right of all Workers to belong to What ever Organization They Wish.

The coal operators have stopped all negotiations at present, and declare they will have nothing to do with the miners unless the men change their committee and renounce the Mine Workers' Union of Canada. This condition we cannot and will not accept. We will fight to the last ditch for the right of the miners to belong to whatever organization they wish.

Above we state our position. The operators charge us with being on a political strike, but it is they that are making it so. They place in the forefront the question of men renouncing a particular organization as the first condition before negotiating. We put in the forefront our economic demands, and we insist on the right to organize, that the men in all mines shall be free to belong to whatever organization they please.

We demand that there be No
Wage Cuts; No Lay-Offs, and that the operators recognize the committee elected by the men, of every mine.

We understand the operators' maneuver in trying to smash the right of the workers to organize, to denounce unionism. The operators wish to establish seab conditions in all mines and put through wage cuts and lay-offs and prevent the men from being allowed to act collectively. Therefore they are only pulling the old "red herring" across the trail, and shouting "Red Union." We are determined to fight against the operators choosing our committees, which are to speak for us.

We are determined to stop the operators' blacklisting our active comrades because of their union activities, by laying them off, and then, as Mr Vissac, manager of the Blairmore and Bellevue mines, declares, they will not be able to be allowed on any Union committee or to be represented by the Union.

We are against Lay-Offs unless adequate provision is made for maintenance. We cannot accept any further cutting down of our earnings by a wage cut. Already our wages are so low that we cannot maintain ourselves in any kind of decency. During the past years, by various means; i.e., short time work, etc., our earnings have already brought our level of existence down to such a point that we cannot permit it to go any lower.

We will not be driven down to coolie levels of subsistence. We will not give up the right to organization, or allow the operators to interfere with the committees that we elect.

We will fight to the last ditch against any wage cuts, lay-offs, and for the right to organize; and these are the true issues of this strike, and no others.

SHE WORRIED ABOUT HER WEIGHT

"I started taking Kruschen Salts a month ago. I have lost 5 pounds in weight, and I feel as if I have lost 80 lbs. I am full of vigor, whereas before I was worried about my condition, as I was listless and worried over little things. But I am thankful to say that, were my troubles doubled, they would not worry me to-day—thanks to Kruschen."—Miss V. P.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat—take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning, for "It's the daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. Kruschen daily means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

Modify your diet, and take gentle exercise. The stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are tuned up, and the pure, fresh blood containing these six salts is carried to every part of the body, and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and slanting figure.

Ask For Protection Of Livestock Industry

Dominion Minister Of Agriculture Requested To Call Conference

A meeting of the Saskatchewan Livestock Board held in Regina, passed a resolution requesting the Dominion Minister of Agriculture to call a conference of all livestock interests in Canada before the Imperial Conference in Ottawa in July to draft a policy for the protection of the livestock industry to be presented at the conference.

The meeting also endorsed a similar request from the Western Canada Livestock Union. It was intimated at the meeting that in the case of the Dominion declining these requests the Livestock Union might call an independent meeting and, in case this was done, the Livestock Board requested that the six presidents of the Saskatchewan Associations, horse, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and ranchers, be invited to attend.

Coal Production

Heavy Increases Shown For Saskatchewan and Alberta Mines

Canadian coal producers reported an output of 1,188,349 tons of coal during February; an increase of 23.4 per cent. over the February, 1931, production according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Alberta's production reached a total of 537,025 tons as against 338,502 tons in February, 1931. Nova Scotia's output was 349,830, a decline of 13.4 per cent. from the total for the corresponding month of last year. Compared with February a year ago, the British Columbia production of 17,027 tons showed an increase of 18.8 per cent.; Saskatchewan's output of 108,435 tons recorded a 99.1 per cent. advance; on the other hand, the New Brunswick production of 19,032 tons was 10.3 per cent. lower.

Receipts of anthracite coal consisted of 119,495 tons from the United States, 8,916 tons from Great Britain, and 650 tons from Belgium. Imports of bituminous coal totaled 376,846 tons, of which tonnage the United States supplied 99.3 per cent. and Great Britain the remainder.

Exports of coal from Canada were recorded at 20,948 tons or 24.5 per cent. above the February, 1931, total. Approximately 72 per cent. of the month's exports were cleared through customs' ports in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Tax On Insurance

Imposition Of One Per Cent. Of Premiums Other Than Life, Marine and Farm Mutual

Imposition of a tax of one per cent. of net premiums of insurance companies authorized to transact business in any province of Canada, other than life, marine and farm mutual was announced in the budget speech of E. V. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, in the House of Commons.

"The tax upon insurance premiums passed at the last session was not put into effect by proclamation as provided by the statute, owing to difficulties over the jurisdiction of Dominion and provinces in the matter of insurance," Mr. Rhodes remarked.

"It is now proposed, under the Special War Revenue Act, to impose a tax of 1 per cent. of net premiums of insurance companies authorized to transact business in Canada or in any province of Canada, other than life, marine and farm mutual. This tax was in force from 1915 to 1929. British and foreign companies, not so authorized, but maintaining deposits with the Dominion, will also be assessed 1 per cent. of net premiums received in Canada. Canadian policyholders who insure their property in Canada with companies other than those mentioned above, will be charged a tax of 15 per cent. of the gross premiums payable on such insurance."

Recipes For This Week

(By Betty Barclay)

ICE BOX LEMON PIE

(Makes 1 pie)

Mix thoroughly

1 1/2 cups sweetened condensed (not evaporated) milk.

1 cup lemon juice.

Grated rind 1 lemon.

2 egg yolks, beaten.

Four into pie shell, 8-inch size. Cover with meringue made of 2 egg whites beaten stiff with 2 tablespoons sugar.

Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until meringue is brown (6 to 12 minutes). Chill before serving.

PORTUGUESE TOMATOES

2 cups cooked meat.

6 large tomatoes.

2 cups gravy.

1/2 teaspoon sugar.

Salt and pepper.

Peel the tomatoes and simmer them gently in the gravy, adding the seasonings to them. When the tomatoes are tender but have not lost their shape, skin them out and put where they will keep hot. Heat the meat in the gravy and make rounds of toast. Serve the meat on the buttered toast with a tomato on top of each.

New Kind Of Auction

Fishing Hints In Waters Of New Brunswick Leased

Of international interest to anglers, an auction, the only one of its kind in the world, was held in the assembly chamber of the New Brunswick parliament building, when 35 stretches of trout and salmon waters were leased to the highest bidders for 10-year periods. No bids were made for the remaining 23 leases. As a result of the sale of fishing privileges the province will receive a yearly revenue of $57,318.50.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

APRIL 24

ABRAHAM'S GENEROSITY TO LOT

Golden Text: "In honor preferring one another."—Romans 12:10.

Lesson: Genesis 13.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 133.

Explanations and Comments

The Problem, verses 5-7.—The land of Canaan was not fertile enough to support such large flocks and herds as both Abraham and Lot had, especially after there had been a severe famine, Genesis 12:10. Their herdsmen were continually quarreling over the pastures. Not only was there not enough pasture for them, but they did not have the whole land to themselves—the Canaanite and the Perizzite were there too. Some scholars think that the Perizzites were the original inhabitants who had been conquered by the Canaanites.

The Peace Measure, verses 8-9.—Abraham would have no strife between himself and Lot, nor between their herdsmen. The uncultivated country was before them, he told Lot. "He was more intent on peace than on plenty; he preferred fraternal fellowship to selfish increase," and so he bade Lot choose the side he wanted and he himself would take the other.

The Choice, verses 10-13.—They had a wide prospect from a hill above Bethel. On the one side of them were the rather barren hills of Judea, from two thousand to four thousand feet high. On the other side was a rich plain ten or twelve miles broad through which the Jordan flowed. Lot's choice was the fertile plain of Abraham's. The well-watered fertile plain on the east, which was "as the garden of Eden," was his choice. What if the plain was filled with cities whose inhabitants were a proverb of lawless wickedness? He would only pitch his tent "toward Sodom"; but dire results followed.

"Lot was a man of the world, sharp as a needle, having an eye to the main chance. He boasted to himself that he always 'took in the whole situation.' But he had very imperfect vision. He saw 'all the well-watered plain of Jordan,' but he overlooked the city of Sodom, and its exceedingly wicked and sinful peoples. And the thing he overlooked was the biggest thing in the outlook! It was to prove his undoing."—H. J. Jewett.

The Compensation, verses 14-18.—"What lay behind Abraham's magnanimity? More than mere kindness to a younger man. More, too, than a mind superior to material values. He had been called of God for a great purpose, and that certainly was something greater than accumulation of wealth. There was an inward vision to higher ends which made him treat the question of a better or worse grazing-ground as a mere detail of life. He was content to leave his destiny and the whole question of 'less' or 'more' in other hands."

This is what was recognized by the gracious revelation made to him when his generosity had been accepted without gratitude. Former promises became more precise and more detailed. "All the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever." He is bidden to "go through the land in the length of it and the breadth of it" in the proud consciousness of possession. If he has sacrificed a part of it to his kinsman, there will be no impoverishment. The renewed and extended promise included more than territory. There was a specific assurance concerning the attitudes of his descendants. They would be abundant so that the land would be fully possessed. "Thy seed as the dust of the earth"—beyond counting—that is the assurance. God is not to be outdone in generosity by him. If Abraham gives generously, God gives tenfold more.

Rum Running Case

Nova Scotian Vessel Is Forfeited To United States Government

The Nova Scotian vessel, "Josephine K," which was seized off Ambrose Light in January, 1931, has been forfeited to the United States Government with the consent of her owners. It was announced in New York.

United States Attorney George Z. Medelle disclosed the action which, he said, was agreed to by counsel for the Liverpool Shipping Company, owners of the boat. The wines and liquors found aboard will be destroyed.

Seizure of the boat caused international complications because her skipper, William P. Cluett, was killed in the coastguard chase. An inquiry, however, resulted in the ruling that the coastguard acted within regulations.

Community Progress Competitions

Gratifying Results Attend Movement Sponsored By Canadian National Railway

The closing entry date for the Canadian National Railway Community Progress Competitions for 1932 has been set for April 30, by Dr. W. J. Black, Montreal, director of the Department of Colonization and Agriculture for the railway.

In commenting on the results of the two years competitions, which were most gratifying, Dr. Black said an advancement quite substantial in character has been registered in the extent of the public interest being taken by many communities in their local schools, and the education, both primary and higher, of their young people. In agriculture a drive has been instituted for livestock improvement, unprofitable breeding stock has been disposed of, finer soil cultivation has been adopted, good seed has been recognized as more important, the physical conditions of farms, dwellings and buildings generally have been improved, and rural highways have been built or reconditioned.

In Public Health also interest has been stimulated. The prevention and control of infectious diseases has been given more attention, and in some cases municipal doctors have been appointed. Boys' and girls' clubs have been organized where few, if any, previously existed. Agricultural societies, farmers' and women's associations, institutes or clubs have been brought into being or have been advanced. Closer co-operation in community relations has been encouraged, and influences for the general betterment have been promoted, including due consideration for observance of law and order.

In the farm home the handicrafts have been given a premium and the coming generation of workers has been encouraged to preserve and perpetuate the best that has been brought to this country from other lands.

The 1931 prize money totalling $1,750 for each of the three Western Provinces is being spent on worthwhile projects such as purchase or renting of pure bred stock and bulls; purchasing seed-cleaning plants; organizing boys' and girls' clubs covering seed growing, poultry, gardens, calf, and swine; beautifying school grounds and purchase of playground equipment and school libraries; establishment of fairgrounds, sewing clubs, and assistance to community halls and other community efforts.

Altogether the results so far have been a fine achievement, demonstrating the possibilities of a united effort toward the great goal of Canadian Citizenship.

Will Be Lenient

Radio Owners Given Time To Pay License Fee

A lenient attitude is to be taken by the Department of Marine in the collection of the $2 license fee for radio receiving sets. In a statement issued by Alfred Durand, Minister of Marine, he made it clear that radio owners would be given until June 1 to secure their new licenses and when a citizen was willing to pay, the Department would give him ample time to do so.

Canada's Radio Problem

Public Ownership and Control Believed To Be the Best Solution

Three witnesses favoring a distinct form of public ownership, and two who were not committed to either principle but bespoke action to protect authors and composers who create the matter used in radio broadcasts, furnished evidence heard by the parliamentary committee on radio, Professor B. K. Sandwell, Montreal, and Louisbourg de Montigny, Ottawa, both representing the Canadian Authors' Association, urged that authors and composers be assured remuneration from those who benefit from their work.

Professor Clement Hambourg, Toronto; Dr. D. R. Clarke, of the McGill Conservatory of Music, and J. P. Garrett, radio editor of the Western Producer, Saskatoon, favored the principle of public ownership as the means best calculated to solve Canada's radio problem.

When radio entertainment is left to the judgment of sales promoters it will be so arranged as to appeal mainly to tastes of a "low order," was the opinion of Douglas R. Clarke.

From the viewpoint of technique and programs, broadcasting in Canada could not be worse, musically, Dr. Clarke said.

R. K. Smith (Cons., Cumberland), asked the witness how he would describe music of a "low order" in contradistinction to music of a higher order.

Dr. Clarke listed jazz and such pieces as "The Stein Song" as being of a low order. He excluded minstrel shows, describing them rather as entertainment of a light order.

Public ownership got another boost from J. F. Garrett.

Speaking as one who had always made a hobby of the radio and practically "grown up with it," Mr. Garrett said he had only recently been converted to the principle of government ownership, as the most satisfactory solution of the radio problem.

When the Aird commission was making its investigations in 1929 he was an advocate of private ownership.

Saskatchewan broadcasters had done their best and he paid them a tribute for their efforts to provide good programmes, but the advertising revenue had not been sufficient to meet the cost and he was of the opinion that broadcasters in his province would be glad to be relieved of the burden through establishment of a government owned system.

"We get our radio entertainment largely from the United States, not because we want to, but because we have no choice," he said.

The United Farmers were in favor of public ownership and his canvass of radio owners in the west had convinced him that a further increase in licenses would be no objection if the service could be improved.

The radio situation in the west had been rapidly growing worse, Mr. Garrett said. They had once enjoyed a fair volume of sponsored programmes in Saskatchewan, but due to the economic stringency only one of two and a half hours a week remained.

The railway chain broadcasts had been "a godsend."

Where Does Money Go?

Outlook Of People Alters When Things Shrink In Value

Where has all the money gone? Two or three years ago there were millions by the hundreds, any kind of stocks could be sold, and governments were disbursing with both hands. Today money seems to have sunk into the ground.

A couple of years ago, for instance, International Nickel was a stock value of about one billion dollars—a thousand million. Today its value is stated to be only a fraction of that, $150,000,000.

Where did the $500,000,000 go? In the minds of speculators. The company is actually worth more today than at any time in its history. But people don't think so—that's the difference. If the present stockholders got an idea that the company was only worth a million dollars its value would eventually sink to that amount.

There is no such thing as static wealth—value are always changing. Even gold goes up and down in price. The "capitalists" don't absorb the $500,000,000 International Nickel lost in value. Nobody benefited. Everybody lost.

So it has been with everything that men could buy or sell, houses, cars, clothes, food, furniture, wages. All have shrunk in value. Nobody has gained what you lost in these.

As soon as people think a thing is too dear, it comes down in value. As soon as they get the idea it is worth more than the price asked for it, "demand" sends it up—everybody wants it. Values today are as unreasonably low as they were too unreasonably high in 1929.

People who study these rises and falls of value and buy and sell them, "speculate." A shrewd speculator may get rich. It's a business just like shoemaking or carpentering.

If you are not a good shoemaker, you won't be a success at the trade. If you don't study values, and markets, and demands, and trends, and grasp the principles underlying them, you will be a poor speculator. And if you are a good one and a greedy one, your greed will eventually get you. Greed always clouds judgment in the end.

Law Trials Are Costly

Double-Fee Practice Still In Use In England

Going to law is a costly business in Britain, so expensive, that the sandwich board man parading before the high court building each morning advising the public on behalf of a society hiring him to arbitrate rather than sue often does a rushing business with his warning pamphlets.

Part of the high cost of litigation comes from the system of double fees for lawyers. The solicitor rigs up and prepares the case, "briefing," in English legal parlance. The barrister then goes before the judge and jury to plead, using the brief got up for him. But court procedure itself often is slow and costly apart from the necessity of hiring two attorneys.

Would Not Accept Fee

Sir Josiah Stamp Is Presented With Silver Candelabra

Canada through Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, presented Sir Josiah Stamp, eminent London, England, economist, railway magnate and bank director, with a beautiful silver candelabra, bearing the arms of Canada, an elevator scene, a shipping scene and the arms of the three western provinces. The gift is one to remain in the family of Sir Josiah Stamp, chairman of the committee enquiring in trading in grain futures.

The presentation was made at a luncheon tendered by the Prime Minister and attended by members and senators. "It may be a surprise to you," Premier Bennett observed, "to learn that Sir Josiah refused to accept any fee whatsoever for his services as head of that enquiry."

As the Prime Minister expressed Canada's gratitude to Sir Josiah for his labor and assistance in the interests of this country and parliamentarians cheered the sentiment, Mr. Bennett drew attention to the fact that the candelabra was of Canadian silver, made by Canadian workmen in a Canadian factory.

"Nothing has given me greater pleasure than to receive this beautiful gift and the spirit and thought you have put into it," Sir Josiah replied. But in giving his services at the request of Prime Minister Bennett he had given it willingly and with the sentiment of inter-continental relations. With a shaft of humor in recollection of the controversy which waged between Conservatives and Liberals last session over the attaching of an appendix to the report he remarked: "My report seems to have suffered from acute appendicitis."

Gold Mines Of Canada

Metal To Value Of $1098,892 Shipped To Royal Mint At Ottawa In March

Producing gold mines of Canada for the month of March shipped 198,332 fine ounces of gold, valued at $4,089,892 to the Royal Mint at Ottawa. The above figures show a slight gain over the month immediately preceding when 186,791 ounces, valued at $4,068,637 were shipped.

Ottawa receipts from the Porcupine Camp, the Rouyn district of Quebec and from Manitoba and British Columbia showed gains over the preceding month, while those from Kirkland Lake and Red Lake showed moderate reaction in March.

Of the total the Porcupine Camp contributed $1,662,298 and Quebec mines, including the shipment from the refinery at Montreal East, $553,939.

Profitable Reading

Imagination Enters Largely Into What We Learn From Books

As there are persons who seem to walk through life with their eyes open, seeing nothing, so there are others who read through books, and perhaps even cram themselves with facts, without carrying away any living pictures of significant story which might arouse the fancy in an hour of leisure, or give them with endurance in a moment of difficulty. Ask yourself, therefore, always when you have read a chapter of any notable book, not what you saw printed on a grey page, but what you see pictured in the glowing gallery of your imagination. Count yourself not to know a fact when you know that it took place, but then only when you see it as it did take place.

From sorrow's shores dusk bears us far away.
Our fragile boats drift on that dark sea
Whereof the stardust is the tossing spray.
Night brings a whisper of eternity Into the confines of our little lives,
And peace comes down to dwell with you and me,
No more at least the futile passion strives,
No more love sends us with departing flight.
No longer any hate or greed survives,
Earth's ties slip off when mounting stars are bright,
And peace is ours throughout the quiet night.

Persian Balm—there is nothing like it for creating and preserving a lovely complexion. Cooling, caressing—it soothes and dispels all roughness or chafe caused by weather conditions. Dainty fragrant, it adds exquisite charm to the most finished appearance. Dainty women inevitably choose Persian Balm. A velvety smooth lotion, it makes the skin rosiest in texture. Recommended also to soothe and whiten the hands. Truly a peerless toilet requisite for every woman.

Tax On Telegrams

Also On Cables, Radio Messages and Long Distance Telephone Calls

The Canadian taxpayer will once again be required to pay a tax on telegrams, cables, and radio messages, under the terms of the budget brought down by E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance. A new feature is the imposition of a tax on long distance calls by telephone. The tax is five cents.

The resolution providing for imposition of the tax reads as follows: "That on every cable and telegraph or radio message originating in Canada for which a charge of more than 15 cents is made, the sending press despatches, and on every long distance telephone call originating in Canada for which a charge of more than fifteen cents is made the sending company shall pay to the consolidated revenue fund a tax of five cents and may charge the same to the person paying the regular charges for such message."

A novel electric candle-lamp has been perfected which, when raised from a table on which it rests, is lighted. On being placed on the table again, it is extinguished.

Condemns the Tourniquet

Lancet, British Medical Journal, Calls It "Disreputable Relic"

The tourniquet, bound tightly around the arm or leg to stop bleeding, is no longer considered good practice in first-aid, it appears from an editorial note in "The Lancet," British medical journal. The danger of prolonged pressure with this instrument was emphasized and the tourniquet itself was referred to as "a disreputable relic of the past whose only habitat should be the museum."

For seven years a Belgian physician, Dr. M. Stassen, has dispensed with the tourniquet in the first-aid equipments for which he has been responsible. "The Lancet" points out. Dr. Stassen thinks the tourniquet is a frequent cause of shock and gas gangrene. By completely stopping the blood circulation in the injured limb, it promotes infection in the crushed and torn tissues. Its removal is followed by absorption of poisons capable of killing a patient already weakened by cold, shock and loss of blood.

Income Tax Collecting

$244,000,000 Collected By Federal Government In 14 Years

In the 14 years the income tax has been in effect approximately $744,000,000 has been collected by the Federal Government.

The collection of this sum has cost less than $26,000,000.

These were points of interest in a recent broadcast by C. S. Walters, commissioner of Income tax, Ottawa, on the Dominion Income Tax.

The average yearly income tax for the first 13 years was more than $52,000,000, while the collection for the last fiscal year will total more than $61,000,000.

Last year about 20 per cent. of the total revenue of Canada was raised by the income tax, Mr. Walters said.

Oldest Peer Dead

Lord North, the oldest peer in Great Britain, died recently at his home at Wroxton Abbey. He was 95 years old.

About one-third of the telephones in the United States are now of dial type.

Little Helps For This Week

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."—2 Timothy 1.7.

Lord and Father, great and holy! Fearing naught, though weak and lowly.

For Thy love has made us free. By the blue sky bending o'er us. By the green earth's flowery zone, Teach us, Lord, the angel chorus, Thine art love and love alone.

—Frederic W. Farrar.

"Fear may create the enforced obedience of the slave, love only can win the devotion of the child, and that is why God hath not sent to us—who know the truth and whom the truth has made free—the spirit of fear and bondage, but of love, and of power, and of a sound mind. And this love is the sole basis of holiness.—Ibid.

Exempt From Sales Tax

Pastries Not Made From Bread Dough On Free List

By virtue of the budget, exemption from sales tax has been applied to cakes, pastries, pies and cookies, not made from bread dough, provided that the bakers of such commodities had not a sales volume exceeding $5,000 in the last calendar year.

Instructions to collectors of excise have been issued to this effect by the Department of National Revenue.

Relief From Asthma. Who can describe the complete relief from suffering which follows the use of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy? Who can express the feeling of joy that comes when its soft and gentle influence relieves the tightened, choking air tubes? It has made asthma sufferers a thing of the past for thousands. It never fails. Good doctors everywhere have sold it for years.

Television Counting

Guglielmo Marconi, who announced that he had made successful tests of a new shortwave radio telephone, disclosed recently that he is turning his inventive genius to television. "I expect soon," he said in an interview, "to be able to see my family in New York while I speak with them by wireless telephone."

Sorry To See Night Coming She Could Not Sleep

Mrs. K. McElroy, Kirkfield, Ont., writes—"I was very nervous and run down, was short of breath, and had smothering feelings, and was sorry to see night coming as I could not lie down or go to sleep."

I was advised to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took seven boxes and am now completely relieved; can sleep fine all night, and have gained in weight."
